LONGWOOD GARDENS

The world's premier horticultural showplace

In 1906 when a historic arboretum of centuries-old trees was slated to be cut for lumber, industrialist and philanthropist Pierre S. du Pont purchased the property to save the trees. He then began creating a world-class garden like no other.

Longwood Gardens, a jewel situated in the historic Brandywine Valley, is a place of unparalleled beauty and grandeur. Often referred to as the world's premier horticultural showplace, Longwood's ever-changing gardens and opulent conservatory offer a new experience with each memorable visit. From dazzling fountains to entertaining concerts and performances to fine and casual cuisine, the breathtaking setting of Longwood plays host to many one-of-a-kind events throughout the year.
